Respect at Work Legal Clinic

Under the Respect at Work Legal Clinic, the MWC legal team provides free legal advice to newcomers to Canada who have faced or are facing sexual harassment at work.

Free legal services are available at the MWC office in downtown Vancouver and at ISSofBC offices in the greater Vancouver area. Interpretation is available upon request.

Who We Are

The Migrant Workers Centre (MWC) is a non-profit organization that provides free legal education and assistance to migrant workers in BC.

MWC also works to advance fair immigration policy and improved labour standards for workers through law and policy reform and test case litigation.

What is Workplace Sexual Harassment?

Workplace sexual harassment involves conduct of a sexual nature that is unwelcome and that negatively affects the work environment or leads to adverse job related consequences.

Sexual harassment can involve:

- Unwanted touching
- Offensive jokes
- Sexual suggestions or requests
- Staring at, or making comments, about one's body
- Showing sexual pictures
- Being verbally abusive because of gender
- Saying or doing something because a person does not conform to gendered stereotypes

Sexual harassment affects people of all gender identities and sexual orientations.

Who Is Eligible For Services?

All newcomers to Canada are eligible for legal services. This includes:

- Migrant workers
- Permanent residents
- Refugees and refugee claimants
- Naturalized citizens
- International students

Public Legal Education

MWC also provides training on sexual harassment for service providers and newcomer communities across the province of BC. If you are an organization interested in arranging a training for your staff or clients, please call 604-404-1931 or email info@mwcbc.ca.
